HERE’S the Deal ..

By Jeanette Clark

So do you wanna save a “buck” or two? There are two “if’s”...IF your property has been recently reassessed by the Assessor’s office and has a lower rate due to the reassessment AND IF your home is mortgaged and property taxes, etc., are held in escrow for payment to the county, you MAY be eligible for a refund of the difference of the escrow held tax money not distributed. Check your 2009, 2010, and current secured property tax bills to determine if there is a difference. The deal is that the property owner has to make an inquiry to the mortgage-escrow holder to request a refund.

Also, now is the time to save even bigger "bucks." If you, as a property owner, wishes to clear your property of combustible fuels, the Natural Resource Conservation District (113 Presley-Suite 1, Grass Valley) may have grant money to help you with your project. Talk with Mr. Tony Sunseri who is the contact for the "re-forestation" projects.

And, now for the NEWS!

■ FREE Defensible Space Training is being provided by the Fire Safe Council of Nevada County. May 2 & 3. Monday and Tuesday morning sessions. 1st day - information and instruction on what to look for with a free HOT lunch. 2nd day - practicum in the field looking at a volunteer site.

■ Firewise Community assessment is being provided by the Fire Safe Council of Nevada County. This is a necessary noninvasive inspection of our neighborhood so GCHNA can draw up a plan of action in order to achieve our certification as being a Firewise Community and be ready in case of a wildfire event. We MAY be able to attain this certification by our annual road picnic in September.

■ CBDG News – Sean Donovan, Secretary of HUD, (Washington D.C.) and his crew are finalizing the review for a waiver in order to fund Nevada County's CFD #007-1 a tax assistance grant for low income families. Nate Beason, Jory Steward, Eve Diamond, and Kyle Thompson have been keeping GCHNA in the loop when new information comes down the "pike."

■ NID and GCHNA will be hosting a CFD informational meeting in May.

■ CFD #0007-1 Pending "Ribbon Cutting Celebration" in August/September announcing the completion of the NID's Cement Hill Pipeline Project. This may be in conjunction with the annual picnic. Stay tuned.

■ Annual picnic is scheduled to be held at Tobiasson Park (known to the locals as Coyote Park) just above the Madelyn Helling Library. This will be a collaborative effort between Nevada County and GCHNA. There will be historical commentaries, walking tours, volley ball games, refreshments, live music, Firewise training with Joanne Drummond, exhibits, and loads of fun.

So, what's new with you? If you are bored, come join us. If you are hyperactive, come join us. If you have a passion to serve our neighborhood, come join us. We are in need of a Vice President, Corresponding Secretary, and neighborhood representatives for Crystal View Heights, Lower Cement Hill, and Southside Cement Hill. Come and join us...one and one-half hours a month and perhaps volunteering for a project/activity that you would enjoy doing. Help us maintain our mission goal "to protect and preserve the rural qualities of our neighborhood by providing a forum for group action as needed."

Reawakening A Silent Song

Those of you who attended the GCHNA annual picnic in September will remember the ceremony welcoming descendants of the local Nisenan community home to Cement Hill and the presentation by representatives of the tribe. Shelly Covert sang a lovely traditional song to begin the presentation.

Judith Lowry, who is the director of California Heritage Indigenous Research Project in Nevada City and attended the picnic, wrote an article for the magazine "News from Native California" in which she explains how traditional Nisenan songs are gifted from one generation to the next and that these songs can be sung by only those who the elders feel are worthy. Judith recounts Shelly's preparation for her singing at the picnic in an excerpt from the article reprinted below.

"Shelly Covert could feel the eyes of her entire family upon her. She knew in a moment that a duty had been thrust upon her, an honor for which she felt woefully unprepared. After all, she had been a musician most of her life, the embodiment of her family's musical talent. But that was rock and roll! How could she find a way to sing these ancient songs when her talents had always had her belting out big notes to the fat sounds of screaming guitars, driving drums, and crashing cymbals, all amplified? She and her bands had faced big audiences before, too, but this new responsibility, not merely to deliver a good time but to uphold something precious and rare and very sacred, and with nothing for accompaniment but a small deer hoof rattle, was daunting.

Because of her respect for her culture, taught to her by her family, she knew that although she could learn the songs on her own, from recordings, she needed to consult Rose Kelly-Enos, Lizzie's daughter-in-law, a noted California elder and tribal ceremonialist in her own right. Rose resides in Clipper Gap, where she has preserved her people's dances and songs for several decades.

Shelly made the trip down to speak with her. Rose was very helpful. She cautioned against allowing the songs to be recorded, as they were special gifts. "They are for your use only," she told Shelly and her daughter, Rena, who would be helping her mother practice the songs. One song in particular would be their focus, the song dedicated to the Sutter Buttes, or Histum Yani, as they were known to the Nisenan people. This song, dreamt into being by Jane Lewis, carried the people's requests for good fortune to the buttes. Shelly wanted to be worthy of the passage of this song from Jane to Lizzie to Rose and now to herself, in order to make certain she conveyed the spirit of the song properly. For this, she would have to visit the site of the gathering beforehand, so that she could see and know the place where she would offer her song.

Her mother, Ginger, drove her up to the Cement Hill area on a winding road that boasts many spectacular views for the owners of the elegant homes of the neighborhood. As the car came to the top of the hill, Shelly suddenly beheld a sight that caused her heart to leap. It was the Sutter Buttes, but as she had never seen them before.

Most of us from the foothills see the buttes in the distance as we traverse our way down to Marysville or Chico. They rise unexpectedly and dramatically from the valley floor. Such geological features have always captured human imagination. This one is no exception, with its air of grandeur and mystery. Viewing them from this new perspective, with the buttes seeming so close, so intimate to the ground she now stood upon, Shelly understood immediately why her ancestors felt such a profound spiritual bond with this enigmatic landmark. She felt the song call to her and she knew then that she would be able to sing it with confidence. On the day of the gathering Shelly's eyes searched the horizon for the Histum Yani, as one might look for the face of a supportive friend in the audience for whom one is about to perform. For the tiniest moment in the capricious autumn weather, the buttes revealed themselves through the clouds and light sprinkling of rain and filled the singer's heart. When the time came, she rose and sang, softly at first, carefully feeling her way. She sang to the Histum Yani, in the presence of her family and the people who had gathered to honor her tribe's heritage. As she sang for the good fortune of her people and the gratitude they felt for the blessings of life, and really feeling it in her heart, her voice grew stronger, clearer, and more joyful. The Histum Yani and the skies above once again echoed with the sweet and reverent refrains of a dream song, long silent, now reborn. And the ancestors smiled."

Hirschman's Trail Project

by Bill Haire, Nevada County Land Trust

The Hirschman's Trail Project is awaiting dryer ground conditions. The City did put out a Request for Proposal for interpretive signs to go along the trail between Cement Hill Road and the pond. We are working on the details for the trestle to be built over the big ravine near the house. The contractor for the trail construction is waiting for a start work order from the City. The way the weather is going, though, he will not be starting until sometime in May - maybe later.

Sierra Iris.

Hirschman's Pond.

Shelley Covert is a matriarch in a four-generation household and the secretary of the Nevada City Rancheria.

Update on Courthouse..

The corner of Cement Hill and Hwy 49 is the second choice of the Administrative Office of the Courts (AOC), as they seek to replace our existing courthouse. The first choice is to build an entirely new building at the present location being sensitive to the downtown's historic archi-ecture. To learn more, go to that AOC's web site for this:

Nevada City Gains Title to Sugarloaf

By Editing Staff

Have you viewed Nevada City from the top of Sugarloaf? Sugarloaf, which is accessed from the junction of North Bloomfield and Coyote Street, is the 32 acre backdrop to our beautiful town and an asset to our neighborhood. Now it will be protected forever and the magnificent 360 degree view of Nevada City and its surroundings will be available for all to enjoy, Charles Woods, one of the co-founders of Friends of Sugarloaf, expressed his feelings about Sugarloaf in the letter below. He wrote to urge the City Council to stay the course as negotiations were getting tough. Charles was an important part of Nevada City's preservation era. He passed away on January 20. Sugarloaf meant a lot to him.

Dear Friends,
Sugar Loaf, the prominent, high open landscape directly north of Nevada City has always been the symbolic and actual backdrop of our small city -- in all its manifestations. It is the visual and spatial landmark that defines Nevada City's unique place in the region. Before the town, before Nevada County, before the Sugar Loaf Mountain.

Gold Rush, before the advent of man on the planet, Sugar Loaf has stood as a sentinel, quiet, uninterrupted, both powerful and serene. Its significance must be confirmed and memorialized as the integral, uninterrupted open space that defines Nevada City's special character. I have been a resident of Nevada City for over fifty years and a serious advocate of preservation. I urge the city's acquisition of Sugar Loaf.

Sincerely yours,
Charles Woods

Weather with a Local Twist

By Susan Wiesner

While Nevada County residents often look for the "LOCAL" label associated with food and other products, residents of Cement Hill have another very LOCAL service available – provided on a personal level by one of our neighbors. Andy Peterman offers all kinds of current weather condition information through his weather station on Cement Hill. Those who are weather junkies may have already stumbled onto this internet offering through the Weather Underground website www.wunderground.com (KCA-NEVAD19) providing current weather conditions for worldwide locations. Even more local weather data can be accessed directly through Andy's own website www.treehouse.org/weather. Andy has been monitoring local weather for over eight years and set up his equipment here six years ago when he and Michele moved to Cement Hill. The many micro climates in this area make it very helpful to have the exact data for our ridge. Andy cautions that his property is on a south slope so the sun tends to warm the ambient temperature more than other nearby properties with a north exposure. Therefore, his daytime temperature readings may be slightly above others in the area.

However, the accuracy of his current condition information is much closer to reality here at the 2800' elevation than the Blue Canyon data, which several other weather services use for Nevada City or the 95959 zip code. The forecast data for the Weather Underground site does not come directly from Andy's station but comes from the National Weather Service and possibly other sources. A similar Weather Underground station is located at Lake Vera (elevation 2650') for those who may be closer to that location and elevation. It also provides a forecast as well as current air quality and pollen index information. And finally, an excellent website for weather forecasting with a visual satellite map of the current weather is the National Weather Service Forecast Office for the Western Region, www.wrh.noaa.gov/sto. One may click on "satellite imagery" or "forecast weather tables" and see both visual and detailed information about the weather for your specific area and elevation. So have fun and explore some new sites.

Ferrellgas Update

By Larry Cook

I have been attempting to gather information from Ferrellgas to clarify our position with them. Our contract expires in December. I would like to share some general information with you.

Please note:

1. We have a contract rate of 43 cents over "rack rate". This rack rate is very difficult to track down at times. Hopefully, I will be receiving and sharing a weekly rack rate out of the Bay Area with you in the near future. This will help us to explain our rates, and track them as well. Alta Sierra also has a rate of 43 cents BUT we are charged an additional hidden "freight" rate of 9-12 cents.

You should be being charged $35.00 per tank as a rental fee, not $45.00 as some of us have been. You can request a refund from Ferrellgas if you have the proper records to document this. If you own your tank, you should not be charged a rental fee.

If you opt for "call only as needed" service, you are subject to "haz-mat" fees etc. Extra fees are not normally charged if you allow them to refill "at will". This has been a hazy area to be addressed with our next contract.

If you sign up a new customer for Ferrell-gas, you are eligible for a $50-100 credit, but again this has been inconsistent. I have been instructed by the regional manager that they normally do not enforce the minimum usage clause to determine our rates for individuals on the "call as needed" system. Again this has been confusing.

DO PAY your dues on time as this determines your eligibility for the Association's established rate and benefits. We turn in the list in May of each year. Again, billing and normal communication must be done with the local office in Nevada City. I may or may not be able to help with special problems.
